

Tools for Success

An Introduction to NLP and its Applications

22 November 2011

NLP has been created from studying and modeling what successful people do and identifying the 'differences that makes the difference' in their performance compared to other people. It is a set of tools and a methodology for developing personal and professional capacity in leadership, communication, influence, coaching and the management of self and others.

During the day we will present

- An overview of NLP
- An insight into some of the key NLP concepts
 - Successful Outcome Setting
 - Dealing with "Difficult" People
 - Motivating, Inspiring and Influencing Others
- Examples of personal and organisational applications

Participants on our training programmes come from the private, public and voluntary sectors. They mostly include: Chief Executives, Senior Managers, Business Owners, HR Professionals, Management Consultants and Coaches.

NLP is increasingly recognised by leading organisations as a highly practical and pragmatic skill set to develop the capacities of their people to lead and manage themselves and others, raising performance and results.

People who learn with us are looking to go beyond the norm, willing to push the boundaries of possibility for themselves and others and know 'there is another way' to operate in organisations which is more effective in getting results through people.

"I have worked with Marie on two major change programmes. Her impact is always exceptional and she is the only person I think of when I need help to change culture and behaviours."
IW, Chief Executive
